An Old Relic.

A curiosity and something worth looking at with an appreciative mind, is two sections of a map photographed and in the possession of Capt. John L. Blaine, of the map that was taken from Napoleon Bonaparte in 1815, when captured by the Russians. This map bears the date 1813 and shows to be a well executed instrument, giving complete plat of the country traveled by Napoleon, in the maneuvering of his army during the Russo Franco war. This map is owned by an old Prussian who is now living in Cooke county, and is placed in the hands of Capt. Blaine to sell as a relic of that war, and which would, no doubt, be much appreciated by every one living in those countries.

There appears in this issue an article by the Miles Messenger on the amount of trade that San Angelo has influenced to herself in the past through the columns of that paper, and after reading it and carefully considering every word in the article, it is evident that San Angelo has become too big to turn down the papers from the various towns which surround us. It is a good policy to patronize the surrounding town papers, and it is, without a doubt, bad policy to refuse them your patronage, as they all have an influence whether you think so or not, since every man and every paper has a certain amount of influence.

What Outsiders Think of San Angelo.

During the six months the MESSENGER has been published, there has never appeared in its columns the advertisement of a dry goods house from Ballinger, San Angelo, for a time advertised dry goods liberally in the MESSENGER. Ballinger merchants ought to be in a position to sell dry goods as cheap as the San Angelo merchants, but we find after more than a month's investigation, that San Angelo gets fully ninety per cent of the dry goods business that goes from our home merchants. This is no complaint; we print it merely to show that the trade follows the liberal advertiser.—Miles Messenger.

We would call attention to the card of Dr. J. B. Salmon, who has decided to make San Angelo his home. The doctor is a very affable gentleman. He says he intends to build in the near future.
